

Improving Client Outcomes, Providing Efficient Care, and Demonstrating the Value of Occupational Therapy

Incorporating Quality Measures into Your Practice

Determine what quality reporting and value-based programs may be applicable in your area of practice.

Find quality measures that are meaningful to and addressable by occupational therapy.

Review any quality scores for your facility or location.

Think about the measures that are being collected for your site or area of practice as you evaluate your clients.

Find ways to address areas of concern related to quality reporting with clients and at your organization.

Follow the quality scores of your organization over time.

Find ways to incorporate continuous quality improvement into your practice and setting.

Keep abreast of changes in payment and regulatory policy.

Share wins with your administrators, fellow professionals, and clients about the value of occupational therapy.

Continue to review information related to client, population, and system level care.

